At the end of August I was diagnosed with DCIS. Since I have always used homeopathy as an alternative, I started to research on the net for something that could help me.

There were three products that stood out: a Chinese product, a Canadian homeopathic set of shots, and Poly-MVA. After a lot of reading I opted for the Poly since it was the one that had more testimonies and was locally sold.

I spoke to Gary and told him about my challenge, especially the fact that, if I needed radiation, I felt the Poly might help with my energy level. As a full professor of Education at Cal State San Marcos, I was concerned about the fact that my three hour classes would leave me drained, especially once I started the radiation.

It has been two weeks since I started the Four Corner Protocol. On the first day I thought I was not going to be able to keep it down. I became sick with nausea and was really concerned about the taste. Little by little I found liquids that I could use to make it more palatable and became used to it.

I had a lumpectomy on Wed. Sept 19th, 2007. Amazing as it may seem, my whole family fell asleep by 9 pm that night, while I was up until midnight. Also, I only needed one Vicodin pill that day and have not had another one since then.

My level of energy has stayed high, I am healing properly, my appetite is good, I am sleeping better, and my quality of life is improving. I have not had to take more than two Tylenol pills per day, and my craving for caffeine drinks through out the day is gone.

I guess I did not remember how well one can feel and assumed I was doing very well. Needless to say that after two weeks on the 4C Protocol, I have already felt the difference and have realized I was depending on pain killers and caffeine drinks to feel well.

Tomorrow I am going to get the Pathology results from my surgeon and he will send me to the oncologist. I plan on taking all my bottles with me just in case they ask what I am taking. Hopefully the report will be good. Regardless, I know that the Poly is really working and I am telling all my friends and relatives about it.

I will keep you posted on my progress and will continue to let others know what a good product you have.

Take care,
